One of the country’s most respected former senators, Senator Tom Daschle has crossed party lines throughout his extensive career in public service, working with both Democrats and Republicans to make a difference in the lives of millions of Americans. From healthcare reform to addressing poverty relief in the developing world, Daschle has been an influential voice in American politics. Although he is no longer in the Senate, Daschle continues to be a driving force in health care reform. In 2007, he joined with former Majority Leaders George Mitchell, Bob Dole, and Howard Baker to form the Bipartisan Policy Center, an organization dedicated to finding common ground on some of the pressing public policy issues of our time.

Dr. Darcy Freedman is an Assistant Professor and Centenary Faculty in Social Disparities in Built Community Environments at the University of South Carolina, College of Social Work. Dr. Freedman is Affiliate Faculty with the Women’s and Gender Studies Department, Institute for Families in Society, Research Consortium for Children and Families, and the Center for Research in Nutrition and Health Disparities at USC. Dr. Freedman joined the USC faculty after completing a trans-disciplinary doctoral program in Community Research and Action at Vanderbilt University and a MPH at Emory University. Dr. Freedman’s research is focused on understanding and redressing health disparities and promoting health equity through efforts aimed at improving access to healthful foods. Much of her research uses a community-based and participatory approach to address food (in)access and resulting health and social injustices. In addition to her scholarship, Dr. Freedman was the Founding Director of the Food Security Partners of Middle Tennessee, a coalition aimed at creating regional food systems change.

In 2002, Dr. Richard Carmona was nominated by the President and unanimously confirmed by the United States Senate to become the 17th Surgeon General of the United States. Dr. Carmona was selected because of his extensive experience in public health, clinical sciences, health care management, preparedness, and his commitment to prevention as an effective means to improve public health and reduce health care costs, while improving the quality and quantity of life.
