She speaks and writes extensively about incentives to promote a more competitive, consumer-driven marketplace in the health sector. Grace-Marie is founder and facilitator of the Health Policy Consensus Group, which serves as a forum for analysts from market-oriented think tanks around the country to analyze and develop health policy recommendations. Pete Earley: A former reporter with The Washington Post, Pete Earley has been a journalist for more than thirty years and has written eight nonfiction books and three novels. CRAZY: A Father’s Search Through America’s Mental Health Madness tells two stories. The first is about Mr. Earley’s struggle to get his college age son help after he is diagnosed with a serious mental illness. The second describes what Mr. Earley discovered during a nine month investigation at the Miami Dade County Jail where he followed prisoners with mental problems through the justice system and into the community to observe what services were available to them.

He has been described by Washingtonian magazine as one of a handful of journalists in America “who have the power to introduce new ideas and give them currency”. More than one million copies of his books are in print.
